Château de Mandelieu-La Napoule

Situated just west of Cannes, the Château de La Napoule occupies a magnificent seafront site first settled by the Romans more than 2,000 years ago.

Originally erected by the Villeneuve family during the 14th century, the fortress was destroyed and rebuilt eight times before it was transformed into a glass factory in the 19th century.

In 1918, the American artist Henry Clews acquired the ruined property, which he restored with his wife, Marie Elsie Whelen Goelet.

Two towers, Saracen and Romanesque, were integrated into the walled complex ; a turreted gatehouse, tall ramparts and sea view terraces reflect the Clews' own eclectic taste.

Exhibition and performance spaces include the vaulted Spencer Gallery and the White Gallery, formerly a miniature theater, as well as the main Courtyard. A romantic english garden style, fountains and topiary embellish the formal gardens laid out by Marie Clews.

It is Henry Clews' sculptural decor, combining wit and turn-of-the-century sensibility, that makes the Château de La Napoule, registered as a monument historique, such a fascinating excursion into architectural history.

Marie Clews created the Foundation in 1951, eight years before her death, in memory of her husband and in order to preserve the Château as an arts center fostering international and interdisciplinary exchange.

Antiquarian Fair

PRINT THIS NEWS, IT'S YOUR PERSONAL INVITATION TO THE FAYENCE ANTIQUARIAN FAIR .

An unmissable antiquarian and second hand "brocante" fair in the French Riviera Cote d'Azur.

Antiquities and period pieces are exposed in a charming setting under the shade of secular plane trees, in the garden of an old provencal "bastide".

Among the many antiquary shows and market in the region, the Fayence Antiquarian Fair is amongst the most appreciated and frequented.

The fair brings together over 70 exhibitors that come to show their unique and sophisticated objects.

The Grand Jardin is located in the historical centre of Fayence, a medieval town near Nice, Cannes, Grasse and St. Tropez.

Thanks to its proximity to important and well-known cities, each edition of the Fayence Antiquarian Fair can boast an excellent attendance by antiquities enthusiasts: many clients from Paris, Monaco, Italy and beyond who have a second home in the South of France.
